COURSE DESCRIPTION:

Doing strong medically necessary behavioral health services can be a challenge given the complex and co-occurring conditions that many of the individuals we serve present with. Add to this multiple disciplines and service arrays to support recovery and the whole thing can be confusing. In this highly experiential training, we will go through the processes of creating treatment plans for children and adults with multiple-occurring needs and services. Then we will move on to implementation of that plan, assuring documentation of our interventions are stage-matched and meet medical necessity. Finally, we will complete transfer and discharge planning processes to note when individuals need a different level of care. In this problem-based learning day, we will use case studies, and the documentation used in NEMCMH in teams of practitioners that work with the same populations, whether children or adults, or individuals with mental health, intellectual/developmental disabilities, substance use, and/or physical health needs.

PRESENTER BIO

Jennifer Harrison is a social worker, chemical addictions counselor and professor in the School of Social Work at WMU. She is a co-founder of Goal Scaling Solutions, a secure digital outcome application. Jennifer's clinical and research focus is outcome measurement, co-occurring disorders, and workforce development. She has received over $7.5M in funding on workforce development and evidence-based practice implementation in behavioral health and has presented and partnered nationally and internationally on shared research and practice.

LEARNING OUTCOME:

This training will focus on key social work skills including treatment planning, interventions, discharge and transition, and case management. Through the team-based experiential learning, staff will work with other professionals, including psychologists, nurses, peer professionals, and direct care professionals to develop shared plans together to support recovery.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

1. Practice taking information from biopsychosocial assessment to assessment stage of change
2. Practice developing goals, objectives, and interventions in plans of service which are stage-matched and meet medical necessity requirements
3. Practice contact documentation that clearly states interventions used and response to treatment
4. Determine as a team how to respond to updates in goal progress in regular treatment plan updates
5. Practice safety planning with individuals who may be at risk of danger to themselves or others, or in risky community situations.
6. Practice transition and discharge processes and how to welcome individuals back if they have disengaged.
